- Have good communication skills, both written and verbal. Be sure to have an appropriate greeting when you answer the phone and on your voice mail message.
- Return phone calls from prospective parents in a timely manner.
- Maintain a list of prospective parents that contact you in case you have to refer to it later.
- Have a positive attitude and smile often.
- Share the positives as well as any concerns you have with parents.
- Show respect for all children and families.
- Keep all information confidential. Do not talk about any of the families or children in your care to others.
- Keep appointments with prospective parents. Canceling appointments could be an inconvenience for them and they might not be able to reschedule.
- Be organized and prepared. Let parents know what your plans and goals are.
- Prepare an orientation packet for new families.
- Dress appropriately. How you present yourself will have a positive impact, especially when you are talking to prospective parents.
- Keep the home clean and well maintained, including the toys. It should be eye appealing to both parents and children.
- Display the children's work at their eye level. It shows you care about what they do.
- Commit to providing a safe and nurturing environment for the children.
- Show responsibility by developing contracts and policies for parents so everyone is clear on the expectations of your family child care business.
- Be sincere and patient when working with the children and families that may be adjusting to child care.
- Have fun with the children and interact with them often.
